GATT Panel To Study U.S. Imports Levy

GENEVA, Aug. 26 (Reuters).-A 24-nation working group, set up at dawn today by GATT, the World trade watchdog organization, is to examine the legality of the 10-percent import sur-charge imposed by the United States and its likely effects on trade and on other countries'

Under the chairmanship of a Finnish diplomat, Klaus Salgren, the group will begin work on Sept. 6 and report to GATT a fortnight later. The 55 members of the council of GATT, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, took this decision after two days of debate which dragged on until the early hours today, largely because of demands by developing countries that the group examine a request that they be exempted from the surcharge.

It was the first time developing countries belonging to GATT, whic_ supervises about four-fifths of world trade, had exerted such pressure in a council meeting. They claimed that they were likely to be hardest hit by the surcharge because the products it affected represented the main hopes for diversifying and developing their economies

But the only response to these countries' demands for special consideration was an instruction to the working group to take account of the levy's likely effects on the economies of developing Other delegates to the GATT are bitter that the freeze was not extended to profits, interest rates and dividends and they claim that Mr. Nixon's proposal of a 10-percent investment tax credit for business bisses the program in favor of business at the expense of the consumer. Mr. Agnew's kind words for

Mr. Meany stood out in a speech to the American Society of Association Executives that otherwise fired a broadside at critics of the President's economic program. Targets of his denunciation included Democratic Senators George McGovern, S.D.; Edmund Muskie, Maine; and Henry Jackson, Wash.; Democratic party chairman Lawrence O'Brien, consumer-rights advocate Ralph Nader, economist John Kenneth Galbraith and other union leaders.

The Vice-President attacked "the knee-jerk reaction of some Democratic candidates that the new economic policy is 'pro-business'." It is pro-labor, proconsumer and pro-taxpayer as well, he said.

One of the oddest criticisms the Democratic candidates is this: what we're doing is wrong, but we should have done it sooner." Mr. Agnew continued. In arguing for the President's program, which he said will "provide full employment in a time of peace," Mr. Agnew said: "The strength of the American system and the reason it is united and free today lies in its ability to restrict its freedom when it absolutely has to, and then to make certain those needed temporary restrictions do not become a habit."

In a dig at the labor ties of one possible contender for the Democratic presidential nomination, Mr. Agnew said: "I am not going to criticize Scoop Jackson. He means well,"

Criticizing Mr. Nader's allegation that the White House gave the auto industry advance notice the freeze, Mr. Agnew said that when you doubt the in-tegrity of public figures and play fast and loose with the truth, "you may just wind up unsaic at any speed," which was the title of the book on auto safety that propelled Mr. Nader to fame.

Joke About Replacement

Mr. Agnew made light of rumors that Secretary of the Treasury John Connally might replace him in the 1972 election campaign and said he hoped the candidate selected would be the nne to help Mr. Nixon the most.
"I don't mind the press boosting John Connally for vice-president, but it's going a little far when someone imitating his Texas accent breaks into my telephone conversations to announce Your four years are up-please signal when through'," Mr. Agnew said.

Despite a White House spokes-man's earlier essurances that there is a possibility the freeze may be allowed to die without eny subsequent controls, Mr. Agnew said: "Some other temporary price stabilization will be needed after the freeze is over." Organized labor mounted these new threats yesterday to the President's program:

• The American Federation of Teachers announced an emergency conference here Sept. 8 and 9 to fight the freeze. President David Sciden wrote to members of Congress that teachers "are most grievously discriminated against" because salary adjustments in the profession are usually made in September.

• The 200.000 members of the painters union were told by their leaders to "strike if necessary" for higher wages despite the freeze and a threatened federal crackdown on walkouts.

• President Floyd Smith of the International Association of Machinists advised 8,000 striking machinists to return to work only if they win an acceptable contract. He also condemned Mr. Nixon's plan to cut back government employment by 5 percent. The IAM represents many blue-collar federal workers.

Imports Levy Given Role in Troop Talks

ing it. West German sources said that they already are braced for "tough" U.S. attempts to use the surcharge to bargain for higher German contributions to U.S. troop costs. They made it clear that Germany will resist any Old Pact Expired

Under a two-year agreement which expired June 30, West Germany was helping to offset the U.S. balance of payment costs of approximately $1.2 billion a year for maintaining a 200,000man American force in Germany. The Bonn government's offset expenditures, in a variety of forms, amounted to about $1.5 billion over the two-year period.

West Germany is trying to negotiate this down; the United States wants to negotiate it up, to about $2 billion for two years. The United States also wants better terms for what are counted as offset costs, In congressional hearings in June, Mr. Samuels testified that the United States seeks interest-free loans from West Germany to replace part of the troop cffset costs previously supplied by Bonn in the form of 3.5 percentinterest loans. Mr. Bahr and Mr. Kohl, ac-companied by diplomatic delega-tions, had met 15 times previously since last November at irregular intervals in East Berlin or Bonn to discuss problems of a general arrangement on traffic between the two hostile Germanys. Mr. Bahr spent several months in Moscow last year hammering out with Foreign Minister Andrel Gromyko and other Russian diplomats the Bonn-Moscow nonaggression pact. Its ratification, as well as that of Bonn's pact with Warsaw, hinges on a Berlin set-Mr. Bahr must work out with the East Germans the exact de-

Neither of these choices, they said, would force Mr. Thieu into making a direct response to Mr. Ky's proposal that he and Mr. Thieu resign, with the Senate chairman to be named president pro tem, and call new elections within 90 days. In another development, Viet-nam Press said voters who by clearances both in and out of government, was prompted by a dispute last June between the government, and the press over the publication of a secret Pentagon study on the Vietnam war. Daniel Eilsberg, a former em-ployee of the Rand Corp., a private consulting firm engaged in defense work, has said that he had made the study available to the press. While an employee of Rand, Mr. Elisberg held a topsecret clearance.

Most of the defense contractors who have been asked by the Defense Department to submit their recommendations on which employees no longer need top-secret clearances are still reviewing their personnel rosters. The Defense Department said it would use the recommendations chiefly for guidance, and will retain the to make the final determination on classification changes.

To Be Smaller

Indications from companies that have already completed their reviews are that the number of top-secret Defense Department clearances outside the government will eventually be considerably smaller.

For example, the General Dynamics Corp., the nation's sec-ond largest military supplier and a major builder of submarines, reported that 1,528 employees, or about 2.7 percent of its work force, held top-secret clearances before it began its internal re-

After the screening process, the list has been pared to 638, according to officials at the company's headquarters in St. Louis. Security measures at the Rand Corp., where Mr. Ellsberg worked, have been the target of particular attention.

All secret documents at Rand's offices in Washington and Santa Monica, Calif., have been placed under the direct supervision of the Air Porce, A company spokesman said that a reduction in the number of Rand employees and consultants with access to topsecret materials from 1,300 to 450 had been recommended to the Defense Department.

Another major defense contractor, the Boeing Co. of Scattle, said that its reivew was still in progress, but reported that at one Midwest facility employing 4,000 people the number holding top-secret clearances had already been reduced from 100 to 34.

School Reported Staying Closed: Despite Wallace

MONTGOMERY, Als., Aug. 26 (AP) .- A school board ordered by Gov. George C. Wallace to reopen a predominantly black school will not comply with the directive, threatened a fine of $1,000 a day if the school is opened, a source close to the board said yesterday. The New Hope Junior High School, in Limestone County, was ordered closed by District Court Judge Sam C. Pointer and its pupils bused to two predominantly white schools to hasten integration.

Gov. Wallace, in one of three such executive orders, commanded the board to reopen the school. The board first decided to do what the governor said. But, the source said, wo board members talked yesterday with Judge Pointer in Birmingham and were told they would be fined $1,000 a day for contempt of court if they opened New Hope.

The governor, told by Judge Pointer for the second time that he has no authority to interfera with school integration and busing, has called a news conference, presumably to fire back a reply.

Dog Lovers Unite To Fight Canines' Ban in Reykjavik

REYKJAVIK, Aug. 26 (AP) .-Dog lovers are making last-min-ute efforts to get the city council to reverse its decision to ban dogs here in Iceland's capital Their drive has been supported by mail and telegram appeals and protests from around the world.

The council decided to outlaw all dogs as of Sept. 1. enforcing an old law barring canine pets from the capital. Authorities had ignored the law since its passage decades ago, but were forced to act after the number of dogs grew so large that they could disregard the situation no longer.

However, police anticipate no wholesale massacre of dogs. It appeared that they would not crack down on persons defying the ban unless specific complaints were received.

Many dogs owners are expected to ignore the order and keep their dogs in their homes or backyards. But the order has apparently whipped up a worldwide protest backing Revkjavik dog owners like 13-year-old Theogora Svinstdottir, who said: "I love my dog. The bad people want to shoot my dog-but I will not let them."

MANILA, Aug. 26 (UPI).—A Philippine Army spokesman sald Communist commandos destroyed two Philippine Air Force combat helicopters with grenade launchers early today in the first such direct attack on government forces since the Communist Huk

The spokesman described the raiders as members of the pro-Peking Communist New Peoples' (NPA) and said they wounded a police sergeant and escaped after a ten-minute exchange of fire with government troops.

The incident happened at a military command post in Isa-bela Province, 185 miles northeast of Manila, and the spokesman likened it to a Viet Congtype sapper attack. It was the latest in a series of terrorist attacks since Saturday when President Ferdinand E. Marcos proclaimed a virtual state of emer-

Mr. Marcos told newsmen the attack was part of what he has called a Communist plot to burn Manila and assassinate government officials.

He said, "There have been repeated attempts to destro; public buildings and I presume there will he more. But as of now. the situation is contained . . . I have asked the proper authorities to protect Manila and other areas from similar attacks."

Mr. Marcos announced Monday that he had suspended the right of habeas corpus, allowing military authorities to arrest and detain subversive suspects indefinitely without charges.

At last report, more than 100 suspects have been rounded up and confined in military campa outside the city.

Grenade Attack

Mr. Marcos's action was prompted by the grenade attack at a political rally of the opposition Liberal party in Manila Saturday night. Two fragmentation grenades killed eight persons and wounded 96 others, including nearly all opposition party

The grenade attack was followed by seven more bombines in the greater Manila area, with government buildings a waterworks station, an electric power substation and the homes of two legislators as targets. There were no injuries and only minor damage was reported.

Russians Told U.S. Racists Slew Jackson

MOSCOW, Aug. 26 (NYT) .-The Soviet mass media vester day asserted that George Jackson, who was killed at San Quentin prison on Saturday, was deliberately murdered by American racists.

Tass, the official press agency; Izvestia, the government news paper, and Moscow radio all carried dispatches and commeuares leveling scorn at the official account that Jackson was shot while trying to escape.

The most virulent attack was a commentary by Melor Sturua Izvestia's New York correspondent, who wrote:

"The murder of George Jackson, whose name became a symbol of the struggle by Negroes against legal and social injustices in the United States, has agitated Americans. He fell victim of a plot of American racists, who cold-bloodedly make short shrift of every black-skinned resident of the country the moment he at-tempts to state loudly his protest against the horrendous system of racial discrimination reigning in America." "The killer's name and face are familiar to the whole world," he wrote. "This is American racism. Its bared fangs cannot be concealed. They are seen through the Ku Klux Klan hood and through the cosmetics of bourgeois democ-

UN Said to Protest Strongly On Israeli Acts in Gaza Strip

JERUSALEM, Aug. 26 (UPI).— Israel called home its ambassador in Washington and studied a note from the United Nations, which newspapers said today. strongly protest Israeli actions in the occupied Gaza Strip.

The Radio Israel broadcast said that Ambassador Yitzhak Rabin would return to Jerusalem next week for consultations preceding a UN General Assembly debate on the Middle East next month, at which Israel is expected to come under strong attack.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Avaraham Avidar confirmed that Israel had received a note from Secretary-General Thant but declined to comment on its con-

However, Israeli newspapers said that Mr. Thant strongly protested the recently launched campaign to clean up the occupied Gaza Strip, the most troublesome of the Arab territories Israel occupied in the 1967 Middle Bast war.

Families Moved

In recent weeks, Israel has moved about 2,000 Arah refugee families, about 10 percent of the refugee population, from the strip's sprawling camps to new homes in other occupied areas.

Israeli Army engineers destroy-ed the shanty homes they vacated to make way for wide patrol roads through the camp in an intensive campaign to break the back of the Arah guerrilla movement in Gasa. According to the newspapers

Yedioth Aharonoth Maariv and Haaretz, Mr. Thant used blunt language to blast the Israell crackdown and demanded that the refugees be returned to Gaza. In editorial comment, Maariy in turn lashed out at Mr. Thant. It said that the secretary-general had become "an official spokes man for Egyptian prepagands."

Mordechai Gazit, Foreign Min-Istry assistant director-general said that he could not officially confirm reports that four African presidents intended to vists both Israel and Egypt before the General Assembly session. But Israel would welcome it he said.

Borderline Case

skirmishing in many areas of the world, with agile Maoist guerrillas raiding the formalistic Communist party groups of the old line. But the most serious point of friction remains that long border on the edge of the deepest Czarist penetration into Asia. Whatever the Chinese feel about the subject, the Soviet commentators are still using it as the touchstone of Peking's policy.

The official Chinese case is that the Soviet-Chinese boundary was the result of unequal treaties, imposed on a weak China by a strong Russia. A similar argument was advanced against the Indian border with Tibet-and hacked by force. Historically, of course Peking has a good case: The Europeans in the 19th and early 20th centuries were carving op China in mncb the same way that they had done in Africa, and the Ottoman Empire. Bot the historical argument is also open to abuse: The Germans, for example, claimed that Bismarck, in seizing Alsace, was only righting the wrong done by Louis XIV, and that territory was to change hands several times after 1871. There are few unflawed national titles to

The Chinese used common sense in adapting their historical claims along the Indian frontier to present realities after beating the Indian Army. There is an even better argument for applying the same restraint to the Chinese-Soviet border, since the Soviet Army is far from beaten. But again,

The Chinese and the Russians have been one side's common sense is grasping greed to the other, and aithough the Kremlin appears to have offered boundary concessions to China, negotiations have come to an awkward halt.

In any case, the Soviet press is charging. in effect, that Peking is bolstering its borderline case by attempting to win the support of the West against the Soviet Union. To be sore, the Chinese have impressed recent American visitors as being far more concerned about Japan than about the Soviet Union. This may be a ploy on the part of Mao's government, although Germany, divided as it is, has haunted the Kremlin for a quarter of a century, and China has just as unhappy memories of Japanese troops as Russia has of the Germans.

Moscow has laid the ghost of the Wehrmacht sufficiently to conclude a reasonable agreement on Berlin. The same type of realism on both sides could bring a frontier settlement between Moscow and Peking. Certainly the People's Repoblic of China can hardly hope for specific Western support in this dispute; Peking as a make-weight against Moscow in international diplomacy generally is one thing, hut struggles over obscure Asian riverbanks can claim the interest of very few except the parties involved. Most of the world assuredly hopes that the Siberian boundaries can be settled as one element in the establishment of a new order of rational relations among all Tragedy at San Quentin...

It is not possible yet to pin down the grisly sequence of events at San Quentin Prison last Saturday. Only the immediate consequences of the tragedy are clear: three inmates and three guards are dead-some shot, some alashed in the throat with a dull razor hlade. The escape attempt, according to prison authorities, was led by George Jackson-himself now dead-who was awaiting trial for the murder of a guard thrown over a third-floor cellblock railing at Soledad Prison in 1970. The official theory is that the gun used to launch the attack was smuggled in to the prisoner by a lawyer only minutes before the outbreak.

George Jackson may have been innocent of the Soledad crime and even of last week's horror. Certainly the lawyer, now being sought by the police, is not to be prejudged. Bot if prejudgment is to be ruled out on one side of this ghastly affair, it must surely be ruled out on the other.

It is one thing to cite, by way of extenuation, Jackson's bitterness at having spent an indefensible ten years in jail for a $70 robbery or to cite in general the grievances law, not the death of its guardians.

that hlack men have suffered over the decades in a white-dominated society. It is a totally different thing to give currency to the vague, unsupported and unbelievable charge made by Jackson's mother that the whole episode was a "setup," staged by the warden and his staff in order to shoot Jackson down-at the cost of the agonizing death of three of their own guards.

The dead prisoner's family is entitled, in its grief, to believe whatever gives it comfort. For the rest of us it is no contribution to the national good-in this case or in the courthouse slaying for which Angela Davis awaits trial-to explain away acts of savagery as the inevitable reaction to social inequities.

Those responsible for the killings at San Quentin, at Soledad or in the Marin County courthouse from which a judge was dragged out and shot a year ago were not martyrs bringing relief to the oppressed. They were destroyers of law itself and therefore of society's best chance to do justice and redeem its failures. The true social revolutionary's hope in this country is still in the life of the

...and Justice for Panthers

If anything were needed to point up the advantages of law over violence, it has been provided in the recent judicial treatment of the Black Panther party, dramatized by this week's indictment of high Chicago officials in the case of Fred Hampton, slain Panther leader

Consider the record: Last spring a New York jury took three hours to clear 13 Panthers of conspiracy, following a trial that lasted eight months. A Connecticut indge soon after dismissed marder charges against Bobby Seale and Ericka Hnggins when a hung jury produced a mistrial. The court acted not out of any declared belief in their innocence hut because "massive publicity," the indge felt, had prejudiced their chance for another fair trial. In California an appeals court had earlier reversed the conviction of Huey Newton, Panther leader accused of killing an Oakland policeman, and a federal court threw out an indictment against David Hilliard for threatening the life of the President.

The major injustice to the Panthers has always been the case of Fred Hampton, shot to death in a police raid on his Chicago apartment. But here, too, belated though the action is, a measure of justice appears in prospect.

Some time ago the state of Illinois dropped countercharges of attempted murder against the other members of the party, who had been seized in that raid. This week annonncement was made of a special grand jury's indictment of State's Attorney Edward V. Hanrahan and 13 other officials. mostly police officers, on charges of attempting to obstruct jostice. Specifically they are charged with having tried to prevent crimina! prosecution of eight of the raiging

The trial will not restore life to Mr. Hampton and a fellow-victim, but taken together with the freeing of Panther leaders in the other cases cited, it should indicate that the courts are not so blind to justice for black men that acts of unrestrained violence are warranted.

Nixon's Surprises

Twice in the space of a month, the United States has demonstrated the off-band manner in which it occasionally knows how to treat its allies. On Joly 15, it was by a mere phone call from Mr. Rogers that the principal ambassadors to Washington learned, an hour before the publication of the official communique, that Mr. Kissinger had just made a visit to Peking and that Mr. Nixon himself had decided to go there.

There had not been any consultation either, as far as we know, before the President's announcement to his people and to the world on Aug. 15. What has he in store for us for Sept. 15?

Why the Generals Moved In

By C. L. Sulzberger it was in no sense a search for TSTANBUL-For the past decade, in between two military coups d'état, it just so happens that Turkey has had high-ranking generals as presidents of the republic, first Cemal Gursel and oow Cevdet Sunay, senior re-tired officer and former chief of staff. It is no accident that this has been the case. The Turks are a martial people and the army plays a very special role in their tradition and society. Sunay, a stolid, deliberate man who clearly considers his words before uttering them, stresses this special role. He says: "Turkey is a particular case, both philosophically and historically. After the First World War the Ottoman Empire lay in ruins and the only force that stood up to cor-rect this lamentable situation was the army under Ataturk." "They unleashed the necessary struggle against great odds and with an enormous casualty roster, especially officers. It was due to this effort that the Turkish Republic came into being and, since Ataturk's death, the army has regarded that republic as its own creation and is as solicitous about its health as a mother is for her child's."

Familar Language

This kind of language may sound strange to Americans but is entirely familiar to Turks because 80 percent of their republican life has been under military presidents. Sunay sees this as a continuum, adding that backward Turkey, facing the problems of modernization, found itself opposed from the start by an ignorant right-wing religious opposition on one side and a left-wing Communist or pro-Communist opposition on the other.

Therefore he contends that the military intervention which overthrew the previous Turkish government last March was "a natural continuation of the army's fight against religious reaction and against Communism, both of which were trying to npset the republic. This," he adds, "was why the army intervened this year;

political power on its own behalf." Sunay, who had been retired and named a senator before being elected president by parliament, attempts to speak as a noo-party and non-military man but is, of course, regarded with the special respect of seniority by serving officers today. He gives every impression of approving the way the armed forces overturned the civilian regime five months ago but indicates satisfaction that the military refrained from direct control (as in-Greece) and maintained a parliamentary facade. Officers Pushed Out ly generals and colonels) were shoved into retirement after the events of last March because they had violated discipline, but he implied these infractions were more right-wing than left-wing, that the offenders had hoped to hait democratic reforms. From Sunay's viewpoint military intervention in regular governing processes was necessary if regrettable and was entirely consonant with the pattern of Turkish history. Moreover, he stresses that this reaffirmed Turkey's devotion to NATO and the United States. He adds:

"There is no doubt that the Turkish nation is very much in favor of the government's pro-American policy. One would have to be blind and ungrateful not to appreciate the benefits we have received from the United States. As for NATO, it is the greatest guarantee of peace that exists to-day. My fondest wish is that Turkey's association with NATO will continue and I can assure you the vast majority of the Turkish nation shares this view."

It is impossible for a foreigner to weigh these views with critical balance. I have known this country more than 30 years and at various times have traveled a good deal around it. I am aware that there are deep geographical and racial cleavages, for example between the Anatolian Turks and the massive Kurd minority, a

The result, at least temporarily, seemed wonderful with a stream of incoming orders.

But the picture soon changed because the costs for manufacturing went up as they always go haod in hand with devaluation. In the first edition he used "advertising" as a code word for the strategy of imposing the corporation's persuasive power on the individual. This, he said, kept him from making the strongest case against companies such as Lockheed and General Dynamics, which impose their will without advertising.

He had not differentiated clearly between the 2,000 largest corporations and smaller enterprises. Nor, he went on, had he made as strong a case as pos-sible about the relationship between the highly developed corporation and the state.

the bill. The real truth is that past Presidents and their high cabinet officials have spent an enormous amount of time working with Congress and trying to get the two branches moving in unison rather than let an impasse develop. It would be folly to seek to alter this constitutional arrangement by a simple act of Congress. It would be a malicious felsehood to use the tragedy of Vietnam as the fulcrum of a war against the executive by a Congress which was wholly involved in the policies it now questions.

Ted Lewis, 80, the entertainer with the battered top hat who began his act with a shouted "Is ev rybody happy?" died of a heart attack at his home here

Mr. Lewis, who popularized such songs as "Me and My Shadow,"
"When My Baby Smiles at Me" and "On the Sunny Side of the Street," began his career as a song-and-dance man in 1911. He went on to international fame and his recordings of "St. Louis Blues" and "Tiger Rag" sold in the millions

He had not made any major appearances since 1965, when he played to capacity crowds at Broadway's Latin Quarter, now a movie theater.

During the last few years, he made visits to Circleville. Ohio, where he was born on June 6. 1891, and saw the new acts at Las Vegas, and he spent innumerable afternoons at the Friars Club here, catching the gossip and reminiscing about the days when he shared hillings with Eddie Cantor and Sophie Tucker.

Musical Prodley

Mr. Lewis, who was born Theodore Leopold Friedman, son of the owner of a dry goods store. was something of a musical prodigy. He was one of those rare persons for whom most instruments hold neither terror nor mystery. He could play most of them and he loved to improvise.

The rise of jazz made it possible in 1911 for Mr. Lewis to get a job with a trio at Hammer-stein's Theater. His popularity grew rapidly as he twirled his hattered top hat, played his clarinet and shuffled across the stage as he half-sang, half-croaked the lyrics of the songs he made famous;

That top hat was something of a lucky accident. He won it in a dice game with a New York cah driver in 1919 and wore it at his next performance. It soon became his trademark.

Many years later, Mr. Lewis estimated that the preservation of the hat and its successors had cost him about 75 cents a week, more than $1,000 altogether.

$7.000 a Week But that 75 cents was not much to a man who had put in several tough years in medicine shows, carnivals and storefront vaudeville and now was earning as much as $7,000 a week, appearing two and three nightclubs at In 1924, Mr. Lewis put on his own show, "The Ted Lewis late 13th century BC was the Frolics." with himself as star, alleged stronghold of Nestor. Frolics," with himself as star, producer and backer. In five weeks, he had lost $130,000, all his savings. Soon, however, he was doing better than ever and earning

Glitter Returns To Venice

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss VENICE, Aug. 26 (IHT).-The 32d Venice Film Festival opened last night under the direction of Gian-Luigi Rondi, the critic for the Roman daily newspaper Il Tempo, who has promised to put the annual event back into the international spotlight.

As 20 nations, including Communist China, are participating with 41 films on the main pro-gram. Mr. Rondi has won his initial bout against the insistent opposition of the left wing of the Italian industry.

The festival began its decline in 1965, with dwindling audiences. Glamour had been banished; the festival had all the dowdiness of a socialist picnic.

But last night there was a touch of old-time glitter in the Lido Cinema Palace. Gina Lol-lobrigida and Ludmilla Tcherina, looking stunning, responded with smiles to the photographers. Countess Lilli Volpi and her entourage were again on hand in a box. Among other guests were Robert Morley, René Clair, Henri-Georges Clouzot and producers from Italy, France and England. Ballet Film

The evening began with an 18-minute ballet short, "Bona-parte," directed by Dirk Saunders choreographed by Serge Lifar, in which Tcherina offered her interpretation of Napo-leon's indomitable spirit amid a décor of stacked muskets, field drums and flying Grand Army

It was followed by the 1971 festival's first full-length feature: Andrew Sinclair's screen adaptation of Dylan Thomas's nostalgic reminiscences of a Welsh fishing hamlet, "Under Milkwood." Its Taylor, Richard Burton and Peter O'Toole having leading rolesbut these popular players are in unexpected assignments.

Miss Taylor is a flighty beauty. an old flame of a blind and aged ex-sea captain (O'Toole) whose memory she continues to haunt, though their romance lies in the distant past and she lies dead in the local graveyard. Burton serves as a commentator, the poet himself, wandering the scenes he recalls from childhood.

The film, beautifully photographed and spoken, casts the brooding spell of Thomas's verse in its reconstruction of the seaside village and the daily rounds of its inhabitants. There is compassion and humor in the vignettes of the rural types: the butcher, the baker, the postman, the town tart, the undertaker, the hen-pecked husband who secretly plots to murder his shrew of a wife, the shopkeeper who writes tourid letters to a pretty widow, another shopker fat drunkard plagued with paternity suits, the adolescent shepherdess longing for love as she day-dreams in the hills beside her flock, an old eccentric who lives surrounded by chiming clocks, and the retired sailor who has lost his sight but not his vision of his far-flung youth,

The character sketches are interwoven in a portrait of an oldfashioned town, so quaint that it is visited by sightseeing buses;

Mr. Burton recites the lyric Thomas descriptions in a rolling, majestic voice; in contrast to the moody reverie are the sharp ex-changes of the townfolk as comic relief. To translate Dylan Thomas into Italian would be comparable to rearranging D'Annun-zio in Welsh dialect and the Italian subtitles fall to capture the Joycean-worded introduction with its punning adjectives and surprising twists of phrase. This resulted in many Italian firstnighters finding the film too slow and talkative, but Englishspeaking audiences will appreciate the beauty and originality of the "Under Milkwood" is the first film of Andrew Sinclair, professor, historian, novelist and TV playwright, Mr. Sinclair has spent a lot of time in the United States.

Frankfurt's Festival of Wells

By John M. Pearce

FRANKFURT, Aug. 26 (UHT).-Any day of the year, old Sachsenhausen is a liveliar place than the rest of this dour commercial city, but during the few days of the annual "Brunnenfest" it has an even gayer face: bunting, bands, beer and-alwaysapple wine.

This year's festival brought 100,000 people into the ancient artists: and merchants' quarter across the Main River from Frankfurt proper.

Despite the mammoth crowd, Sachsenhausen had the air of a village at play. Local bands marched through the narrow streets, playing almost in tune; a father knelt to teach his son the intricacles of blowing scap bubbles; potbellied men, a halfdozen empty beer bottles in front of them, gazed placidly as the 100-foot ceremonial tree went by, pulled by two horses in ceremonial regalis. It was no Rose Bowl parade.

There were no decorated floats. no one throwing candy, and the children tended to get into the abort procession instead of watch ing it from the sidewalk. Old men and women watched, leaning on their window ledges, as they have for years, to greet passing.

Most of the merrymakers last weekend came to drink, filling the taverns to bursting, overflowing the dance floors listening to the band concerts in Paradise Square and sitting in the sidewalk cafés that blossomed in front of every standup bar.

It was a hometown German crowd, with hardly a foreign word to be heard or a camera to be seen.

Sachsenhausen is a pedestrian's paradise at any time, full of culde-sacs, no-parking zones and lanes narrow enough to defeat anything larger than a Volkswagen. And construction of a new underwater cable crossing forced most of the activities away from their traditional home on the riverbank while construction of new buildings closed a few prominent streets, making it even tougher for drivers. Dollar Mixed 3 Major Swiss Banks Move to Protect Franc

The three largest commercial banks here voluntarily agreed today to discourage the dollar from falling much below 3.96 Swiss francs in trading among banks.

By imposing what amounted to a voluntary floor for the dollar. Swiss bankers hoped to forestall legislation planned in Bern that would authorize exchange controls, informants said.

But the effect, some observers said, would be to limit speculation in Swiss francs.

The voluntary rules permit the blg banks to buy an unlimited amount of dollars et 3.96 francs and above. However, if the dollar rate falls to between 3.95 and 3.96. purchases by individual banks are limited to $2 million a day, if the rate falls below 3.95, any pur-chases exceeding $1 million would be blocked without interest for three months.

French Report Reserves Rise 3.087 Billion

PARIS. France's reserves rose 3.087 bil-lion francs ($556 million at the official rate of exchange) in the week ended Aug. 19, figures reported by the Bank of France abowed today.

The large gain, one of the biggest weekly increases in years, reflects the extent to which foreign currency flowed into France in anticipation of a revaluation.

Some observers noted that the huge gain demonstrated that the measures taken since the beginning of August to check the unwanted inflow of capital have failed.

The measures included raising the minimum reserve requirements of banks as well as limiting the foreign exchange operations of French commercial banks and banning interest payments on foreign-held deposits of less than

French Tier System Affects Nonresident Bank Accounts

PARIS, Aug. 26 (IRT).—The ed a convertibility into other curde facto devaluation of the dollar, troublesome to tourists trying to (only open to those foreigners) convert their travelers checks into French francs, is also proving costly to a number of foreign banks, corporations and individuals who held francs before the current crisis broke.

For some of them-all holding nonresident bank accounts—these deposits were e way to speculate on the revaluation of the franc, for others they were legitimate income earned in France.

But they all discovered on Monday, when the two-tier foreign exchange system separating com-mercial and financial francs began, that deposits made before Ang. 21 cannot be simply withdrawn. The francs are considered commercial francs and must be converted into financial francs before they can be used a maneuver that means the owner loses by the amount the imancial franc has appreciated.

However, to avoid the chaos that could have resulted from the sudden new rule, one exception is that checks written by nonresidents in france before Ang. 21 and presented for payment before Ang. 31 will be honored at the face value.

According to a spokesman for the Bank of France, foreigners working in France can deposit their franc salary checks into new "financial franc accounts" and withdraw the same number of francs as they deposited. Of course, for exchange purposes the value of these francs varies from day to day.

The apparent logic behind the overall ruling is that, until Monday, nonresident accounts enjoy-limiting the dollar's decline to near 3.96, the banks were indicating that they did not expect e revaluation of more than 3 percent from the official dollar parity of 4.08 Swiss francs.

Reserve Requirement Plan The voluntary restraints on dollar purchases reinforced existing anti-speculation measures. Most nonresident funds entering Switzerland since Aug. 1 have been subject to 100 percent reserve requirements, meaning that the franc equivalent of the funds had to be deposited at the Swiss National Bank and could not be utilized by commercial banks unless an offsetting amount of funds

U.S. Loss of $544 Million in Gold Possible

Obligation to IMF to Be Honored

DJ).—The United States still could lose more than $500 milhion in gold, despite President Nixon's Aug. 15 suspension of further sales to other nations.

That is the implication, government sources said, of a White House statement at that time that future gold sales would be strictly limited to meeting "outstanding obligations."

The major obligation remaining, the sources said, is to meet any request from the International Monetary Fund (IMF) for the return of $544 million of its gold placed with the United States, which double-counts the gold as part of the U.S. stock. Two IMF Placements

The IMP placement consists of $400 million in gold invested in interest-earning Treasury securities some years ago, and $144 million in gold on "deposit" in the United States, to offset the adverse statistical impact of certain earlier sales by Washington to other countries.

The White House promise to the outstanding commitments, however, does not extend to a $500 million share of the U.S. stockpile that West Germany technically is entitled to with-draw, U.S. and German officials

When Germany sold this amount to the United States in 1969, there was an understanding that it could recoup the gold any time without breaching a stillearlier understanding that it would accumulate unlimited amounts of dollars without demanding gold.

There are other but much smaller obligations remaining to countries that arranged to cash in surplus dollars for gold before Ang. 15, but that did not com-

SEC Plans a Broad Inquiry On the Markets of the Future

The Securities and Exchange Commission will conduct an incurry into the broad issues of the future membership, structure and regulation of U.S. stock markets.

Fundamental questions, such as the need to develop a single, national system of securities ex-changes, will be examined at pub-lic hearings beginning here Oct. 12. After the hearings, the commission expects to be able to decide whether it needs to ask Congress for any new statutory authority and what changes, if any, it should make in its own rules, under existing authority.

In a statement accompanying the commission's formal announce ment of the hearings yesterday, its chairman, William J. Lambert Buying Interest on NYSE

NEW YORK, Aug. 26 (AP-DJ). -The New York Stock Exchange's governing board has approved an arrangement that for the first time would allow a major foreign financial institution to buy a substantial interest in an exchange member firm.

The arrangement involves Cie. Lambert ponr l'Industrie et Finance a Brnssels concern whose activities include banking, real estate, utilities and industrial ventures-and William D. Witter, a relatively small firm based in New York that has built a reputation as a quality research-oriented house.

Industry sources said that basically the arrangement calls for Cie. Lambert to acquire 15 to 25 percent voting and profit participation in Witter. The 25 percent is the maximum allowed in this case by the exchange, to prevent institutional domination of member firms.

The exchange's governing board has a further hedge against such domination. It has specified that any brokerage transactions executed by Witter on behalf of the Lambert interests cannot exceed 5 percent of Witter's annual securities business.

Midday Rally Halves Decline on Wall Street

NEW YORK, Aug. 26 (IHT).-A mid-session rally helped prices on the New York Stock Exchange recover some of their sharp early losses and close only slightly lower in fairly active trading.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed at 906.10, down 2.27 after being down as much as five points in early trading.

Today's profit-taking abated

A spectacular example of the advantage of leading through weakness is shown by the diagramed deal, played in a recent New York tournament.

South opened a weak no-trump, showing 12-14 high-card points. Many experts who use the weak no-trump would choose to pass with this hand, since it lacks both aces and intermediate cards. West was not quite strong enough to double, an action that needs about 15 points when the notrump hid is weak, and made a discreet pass. North used Stayman in the hope of finding a spade fit and then put his partner in three no-trump.

West found an excellent line of defense. Instead of making the normal lead of a low spade, he led the king in order to view the dummy. Two things then became clear to him; The spade suit offered no chance to the defense, and his partner held at most one jack. South had promised at least 12 points, and West could see 27 in the dummy and his own hand.

On the assumption that East held exactly one jack, West had two possible lines of defense. He picked the right one by leading a low heart through weakness at the second trick. He was playing for South to have exactly two hearts, the king and the queen —s not-unlikely event since South's bidding had denied possince session of four hearts.

South won with the queen, and was doomed to defeat. He chose to lead to the diamond ace and run the ten, in the hope that if West won he would not lead the heart ace. But West did continue with his heart ace-his only hope -and the defenders took seven tricks to score 300 points. South's actual play gave him no chance unless the defense slipped. He should no doubt have finessed the diamond ten, a play that would have produced nine tricks if West had held two or three diamonds, including queen hut he would still have failed by one trick

Notice that South would have had no trouble establishing nine tricks if the opening lead had been a small spade.

MARTIN BUBER An Intimate Portrait

By Aubrey Hodes. Viking. 242 pp. $7.95.

Reviewed by Thomas Lask

WHETHER by chance or intent, Aubrey Hodes's word portrait of Martin Buber provides the same kind of peaceful interlude that a visit to that philosopher must have provided in the flesh. It is a modest and unassuming book, designed as an introduction to the man and the work. But whether it takes its tone from the subject of the volume or from the discussion of man's spiritual nature or from the high level on which the talks took place, the book breathes such a largeness of spirit, such a concern for one's fellow man, such a striving for international understanding that reading it is like entering on a personal retreat. Petty problems assume their proper proportions. Buber's career is testimony that there is a side to man that tran-scends the narrow self. If there is one word that informs his life, it is charity.

Although, as the author says, Buber had his Olympian side, he was also very close to the prohlems of everyday living, and the book touches on those differences that troubled the thinking people of Israel, where Buber lived for more than a quarter of a century. Some of these problems make front-page headlines, Arab-Israeli relations, for example, Others deal more closely with the intramural existence of the new state.

How does one reise children on a kibbutz, one teacher asked Buber, so that they will develop a feeling for their fellows in an environment in which all cares and difficulties are seemingly taken care of by the community? "I was born on a kihbutz," said one girl. "In my group there were 25 boys and girls and I didn't have a single friend among them." Buber was not a practicing Jew in the orthodox sense. Age-old ritual and observances left him sold. But he did more than abstain from them, he tried to help the young people to a form of worship that would be a spiritual surrogate for the one they had abandoned.

Mr. Hodes, a South African au-thor and editor, who went to Israel in 1949, first sought out Buber during a personal crisis involving the mental illness of a relative. He was won over by the then 75-year-old philospher, a half century his senior, not merely by his charm and openness but also by his way of handling his visitor, by the complete attention he gave him. Buber was a good talker, but Mr. Hodes found him a better listener. More than that.

over the 6,973-yard Country Club of North Carolina course. Had the traditional match-play formula been in effect, Floyd's margin would have been 4 and 2, meaning Floyd was four holes ahead with two to play. The pair would have walked in from the 16th green. But this event is both new and different since each round is over a full 16 holes and the golfer using fewer strokes wins. In match play, the golfer who takes fewer strokes on a hole wins the hole and the golfer who wins more holes wins the match.

Floyd, the 1969 Professional Golfers' Association titleholder (at stroke play) indicated ona reaction to this tourney. "I felt like I was playing Jack for the title, because of the pressure." he said. "I was concentrating on what he was doing and what I had to do at every hole. I could think of 63 other people I could have drawn instead of Jack." Nicklaus admitted he preferred the traditional match play but said the format used here assured play to the 18th green. "It's hetter for television, for the public, and means higger purses," he said. "But I had no bogeys in two days (including Tuesday's preliminary pro-am) and I have to get the next plane home."

In the meantime, Player was dashing off to Johannesburg. He had made the trip from South Africa especially for this tournament. But Homero Blancas, a husky Texan, eliminated Player in a match that went three extra holes. After 16, each golfer had a 71 and they went into a sudden-death playoff. 3 Atlanta Policemen Suspended Over Assault on Braves' Carty ATLANTA, Aug. 26 (UPD.—Atlanta Mayor Sam Massell said last night a brawl that left Atlanta Braves outfielder Rico Carty with two black eyes, a split finger and bruises was "blatant brutality" and suspended the three policemen involved. Massell issued a statement denouncing the incident but refused to say what actually happened. Carty, the leading hitter in the major leagues last season with a 366 average but out all this season with a knee injury was charged hefore dawn yesterday with "creating a turmoil and simple hattery on an officer."

The policeman, J. R. McEarchern, said Carty struck him when he was trying to break up a brawl between the outfielder and two white men. The white men, McEarchern said, fled while he was subduing Carty.

Cited to Stand Trial

The white men, according to Massell, were off-duty policemen C. E. Turner and L. B. Smith.

"The men involved are hereby suspended without pay and cited to stand trial before the Aldermanic Police Committee at the earliest lawful date," Massell told newsmen at police headquarters last night. "Based on the evidence I have received, I will recommend at that time that they be discharged from further employment with our city."

"I cannot emphasize too strongly my complete disgust with what is apparently an incident of hlatant brutality." Massell "Those involved have brought disgrace to our police department, the city and the profession of law enforcement

Carty's brother-in-law, who was with the outfielder, had also been roughed up.

a room so secret that even the dust had to have security clearance. It was the hush-hush Bush-League Machiavelli Room at the Ministry of Absurdity. The shadowy Prof. Bosko, a figure so mysterious that even the President is forbidden to whisper his name, was slowly said. "Why not?" the professor demanded. "Because it would be unpairlotic, professor. As I understand it, the United States government doing everything in its power to make sure that General Thicu gets re-elected. I don't want to do anything that would hurt my country's Vietnam policy."

Prot. Bosko beamed. "The beauty part! We have submitted your name to our embassy in Saigon and they assure us that you haven't the ghost of a chance of beating Gen. Thieu."

I told the professor I didn't believe a word that came out of our embassy in Saigon and said I was surprised that he still did. I told him to wise up. I had no intention of fouling up my country's whole Southeast Asia policy by taking Thieu and, since the embassy said it was impossible, probably beating him.

"It would be better," I advised him, "if Gen. Thieu didn't have to run against anybody. That wey there would be less chance of him losing,"

"You do not understand," said the professor. 'We have been fighting in Vietnam in order to give the people a choice in the question of who is going to rule the country. Without somehody to run against Thieu, what's to choose? We want those people to have the chance to choose Gen. Thieu over somebody else."

This put a different shine on matters. If the government really

WASHINGTON.—I was led into wanted a democratic contest, it would be hard to say no to Prof.

"You seem interested," tale professor noted, 'Frankly, professor, I would rather live on remittances in Rome than be President of South Vietnam Or the whole United States for that matter, but I am willing to make the sacrifice for my country. On one condition."

"Name it," said the professor.
Would you like us perhaps to call off our fantastically intense examination of your tax return?" "I will need campaign funds, professor. Some under-the-table money from one of your agencies to help me campaign in the provinces, to bribe a few generals, pay for some ballot-box stuffing buy me some television time, and SO OIL

Prof. Bosko was delighted, "Absurd," he roared, "We're backing Gen. Thieu. We will be pouring all our resources into the camsaign to crush you. Why make it hard on ourselves by giving you money to fight back with?'

I said I had understood him to mean that he wanted a democratic contest.

"Sure. A democratic contest," he agreed, "But it's got to be o democratic contest in which Gen. Thieu can't lose."

We seemed to be cruising in

"Look." he said "can't you see now terrible it would look if Thieu got re-elected with 100 percent of the vote after all we have done to preserve freedom in Vietnam?' "You mean you want to have an election..." "Rigbt."

"... that isn't an election." "Exactly | You've got it! At last, old boy. You've got it!"
"And what do I get for finishing second?"

"Well," the professor said, "after the last election, Gen. Thieu had the man who finished second put in prison. He's still there. Excellent chance for you to learn Vietnamese."

I escaped by holding a burning draft card to Prof. Bosko's head and forcing him to take me home in his hush-hush limousine. Copies of this letter are to be taken away from a safe deposit box and given to the police in the event I should turn up in South Vietnam running against President Thieu.

Lipchitz in Israel: A Light That Kills and Caresses...

By Richard Eder

TERUSALEM (NYT).-A young artist is pursued by furies; an old artist is pursued by questions. Jacques Lipchitz, a giant of modern sculpture, has kept well ahead of both in his 80 years.

"Who influenced me?" he said, settling himself even more solidly in his chair and beaming through his white mustache. "Everyone who came before me. Whom did I influence? It's a childish question. History is a very great lady who puts everything in its

Here in Jerusalem, where people tend to ask questions as if they were collecting debts, a man came up to Lipchitz the other and demanded that he explain his work.

"It wouldn't help you," the sculptor said. "If I were to explain it in Chinese, you would tell me you didn't know Chinese, and I would tell you learn Chinese and you will understand. Art is harder than Chinese. Anyone can look: you have to learn to see." Jacques Lipchitz, who was born in Lithuania and has lived in France, the United States and, now, in Italy, had been here because Israel is celebrating his 80 years with two important exhibitions that will run through September. One exhibit at the Israel Museum is a traveling collection of 77 pieces dating from his pre-cubist period in 1911 to the present. other is a gift to the museum from the sculptor's brother, Rubin:

130 bronze-cast sketches, or studies, for larger, finished works.
Lipchitz was not much interested in talking about the exhibits or a retrospective show opening next spring in New York. He wanted to talk about light, the future of humanity, the Jews and a monumental work he has started that sums up his feelings about all of these. He calls it "Our Tree of Life."

He sat with his back to the window of his hotel room. A cypre stood outside, directly behind him, and back of that a sun-drenched stone wall. Beyond were the bere Judean Hills, floating in light Lipchitz spoke of the site on Mount Scopus where his tree will eventuelly stand. "I teli you, I'm trembling," he said. "The view over the hills and the Dead Sea. Don't speak to me about it. It gives me stomach ache.

"When I finish the last study in Italy I must come back and struggle with this enemy, this light. It kills and caresses. You see only wildness in this light."

The tree is an old debt. Lipchitz used to go to Zionist meetings as a young man. "Our slogan was 'If I forget thee, Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning.' Many times afterwards I have been grasping my right hand to see it was still there." In 1947, after modeling a Virgin for the church in Assy, in France, Lipchitz vowed he would do something for his own religion. "A year ago," he said, "the ladies from Hadassah came and asked me to make a statue for Mount Scopus, and I was no longer in a blind alley.

"I started with the sacrifice of Isaac. And then I made the angel slopping it, and over that I put our three fathers, Abraham, Jacob and Isaac, who are supporting the burning bush, and it finishes in a kind of phoenix that never burns, and this phoenix is nourished by the Tables of the Law. Later I said, no, it is not enough. Our nation starts with Noah. This excited me. Showing water as well as fire. Then somebody told me the phoenix was not a Jewish symbol." Both of Lipchitz's heavy hands had risen gradually above his head. He lowered them, and concluded: "So I took it out. But it's still growing." He explains how he felt about Jerusalem:

Jacques Lipchitz dabbles in clay sculpture during visit to youth wing of the Israel Museum in Jerusalem.

"You know, in New York everyone is jumping. An old friend visited me there from Paris and said, 'What's happening to you?' I told him I didn't know, perhaps it was telluric manifestations, but in New York you have to jump. In Jerusalem it is o sort of spiritual jumping. He is curt, however, when the bubbling pride of the Israelis spills over into fatuousness "They took me to an exhibit of Judaica," he related gleefully. "I told them it was kitchenware and they got angry. Jewish art? If a Jew does it, it's Jewish art."

That led him, somehow, to talk about inspiration. "It is o very real thing," he said. "I start with something I know what it is. Then comes something I don't know, an unknown collaboration. You look at a dervish. He walks into the room like you and me. He starts to turn, and then comes ecstasy. But if he doesn't start to turn, the ecstasy doesn't come." Lipchitz, who gave up abstract expressionism 35 years ago, before most people ever heard of it, is cheerful if unenthusiastic about the contemporary art scene. "For me it is the end of a cycle," he said, "but nothing is lost. We are accumulating experiences in a pile. Some new generation will come along and use it.

"They used to call me 'Le Cubiste Optimiste,' I am not pessimistic either about the future of art or the future of human beings. We are not human beings yet. We are on the way."

It would take him four years, he had explained, to finish the 36-foot tree of life. He will do it in his studio in Pietra Santa, near Pisa, where he has his foundry and his helpers-artisans with a tradition of stonecutting that goes hack beyond Michelangelo. He got up to leave. "Now," he said, "I have to live long, so pray for me."

PEOPLE:

The largest crowd since before World War II crowded into Hollywood's Memorial Cemetery this week for the service commemorating the 45th anniversary of the death of Rudolph Valentine, heart-throb of the silent screen until his death in 1926 at the age of 31. Cemetery officials speculated that the mass of mourners could mean a resurgence of the cult born with Valentino's death, of complications from a ruptured appendix. The eulogy this year was delivered by Mary McLaren, a silent-film actress who broks into tears in the middle of her speech. While the mysterious woman in black," a veiled figure who appeared at Valentino's grave for many years, was missing this week, a man with greasepaint on his face attended with a woman wearing a mantilla and satin hot pants. The man said he was a representative of "The Foundation for the Preservation of tha Memory of Valentino," while the woman explained she symbolized the degradation and loss of romance of the jet-age cinema.

Julie Nixon Eisenhower refired from full-time teaching yesterday just two days after taking up her position at Atlantic Beach Elementary School in Jacksonvilla, Fla. The President's daughter, in her second day at the school, was walking beside a book cart helping to distribute teaching materials when a custodian pushing the cart made a sharp turn, rolling the heavy vehicle over Julie's foot and severely splintering a bone of one of her toes. Press Secretary Ron Ziegler said yesterday that the injury has given Julie "a difficult time." requiring a cast up to her knee; she has decided, on medical advice, not to resume full-time teaching but to serve as a volunteer teachers' aide when she is well enough, Alice Roosevelt Longworth confirmed this week that Eleanor Roosevelt once offered a divorce to the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt hecause of his romance with Lucy Mercer Rutherford. Mrs. Longworth told The Washington Post that she had had a "long and delightful interview" with Joseph P. Lash, aothor of the forthcoming book "Eleanor and Franklin." In the book, Lash quotes Mrs. Longworth as saying: "I remember one day having fun with Auntie Corrine (Mrs. Douglas Robinson). I was doing imitations of Eleanor, and Auntie Corrine looked at me and said; Never forget, Alice, Eleanor offered Franklin his freedom.' And I said, 'But darling, that's what
